

PROJECT.....

The design of this extension gives two distinctly different aspects: as viewed from the formal brick fronted elevation of the house the extension is treated as a flanking wall, in matching brickwork, with a swept coping and a solid end pier. On the reverse, the contrasting design is revealed; a quarter-circle plan radiating from a stainless steel chimney, a low sweeping lead roof, wide soffit and deep windows offering a panoramic view of the garden. The garden room is set within a pebble margin with a stone pathway and brick retaining walls, all emphasising the radiused plan.
